Eosinophilic oesophagitis (EoE) is a complex immune-mediated disease. Its causes are multifactorial and the trigger factors are unknown. An increasing body of evidence suggests that gut microbiota is involved in the pathogenesis of EoE. Here, we systematically review the present knowledge of gut microbiota in EoE, and discuss potential pathogenic roles of gut microbiota in EoE. The most important knowledge gaps are related to causative agents and to detail pathways underlying gut microbiota-induced inflammation. Key message Gut microbiota is linked to EoE in a possibly causal manner. The specific microbial profiles that are responsible for disease development are not known. examined for development while the High Court yesterday said it is leaning towards protecting the public interest. Former Federal Court judge Datuk Zulkifli Mohd Radzi said the High Court was the appropriate forum to resolve the disputes over the properties. "But what is in the public interest should be considered first and foremost," he said after hearing the five-day Harun Sadik versus JDC-Tanjung Perak property dispute. Zulkifli said as the case was before the High Court, it was better for everyone involved to see the process through, adding that a study should be made to see what was in the public interest. "When the High Court makes a decision, it is a protection for the public interest. If they think that there is an immediate danger of an impending economic or environmental catastrophe, the High Court can direct the relevant authorities to ensure that the properties are preserved to the public," he said. Former Federal Court judge Datuk Zulkif
