Enchondroma of the lumbar spine. Enchondromas are the most common benign tumors of the spine and have the potential to cause spinal canal enlargement and nerve root compression. To evaluate the clinical and radiological presentation of lumbar spine enchondromas. The cases of 18 patients with lumbar spine enchondromas, all excised from the files of King Fahd University Hospital from January 2003 to January 2013, were reviewed retrospectively. The patients were interviewed to gather their medical information, and clinical and radiological data were obtained from hospital files. Eight patients were male and 10 patients were female. The mean age at presentation was 36 years (range, 18-59 years). The duration of symptoms ranged from 1 month to 15 years. The mean period of follow-up was 24.5 months (range, 12-47 months). The Enneking classification system was used to grade the tumor. The most common presenting symptom was a symptomatic lesion, followed by muscle weakness and hypoesthesia. The most common radiological presentation was spinal canal enlargement, followed by an aggressive lesion. In the univariate analysis, no factor influenced the duration of symptoms. Enchondroma of the lumbar spine is an uncommon but benign tumor that causes pain and spinal canal enlargement. It should be considered in the differential diagnosis of lumbar spinal canal enlargement. Firefox's Thunderbird to Move to SeaMonkey - JamesAldridge

Ron Paul – The Libertarian Rep As I have written before, libertarianism is, by its nature, very anti-the-establishment. To understand the implications of this, let us consider two alternatives – the conservatives and the liberals. Liberals tend to define their views by their allegiance to “The Establishment.” They consider the world by and through that group. In contrast, conservatives tend to define their positions by their allegiance to “The Party.” They define their views by their adherence to the rules that the party has handed down. Libertarians tend to define their positions by their allegiance to Reason. They reason their beliefs through their affiliation with a cause, rather than a party. The libertarian movement has actually been around a long time. But it was born out of frustration with the two party system. The politics of the republicans and democrats had become so corrupt that they were literally trading votes for favors from lobbyists. As a libertarian, I was able to witness first hand how organized politics had become. A candidate would go out and do a fund raising event, and bring in all these lobbyists and local bosses. This was why we found that libertarians could be mistaken for communists. Because they refused to see the world by and through the established categories. As Milton Friedman put it, that “those who control the state always find some method of controlling ideas.” We can see this everywhere – from the New Deal to the LBJ Great Society to the Patriot Act to the attempts to liberalize the marijuana laws. You see, for liberals, the law is king. They are ready to jettison their principles just to get legislation passed. That’s why we find all these so-called “conservatives” turning libertarian on the political issues that really matter. We see this clearly in Obamacare. We find the Republicans like the idea of a single payer system, where there is one plan for all. This is socialism, and is anathema to many conservatives. Yet, that is what we are getting. But it gets much worse. After Medicare was passed in the 1960s, for decades we had a Democrat president, a Democrat House, and a Democrat Senate. All three passed an almost identical plan into law. How did this happen? Because they knew that the Republicans would never approve it. But with a unified Democratic Party, they could pass the entire
