How to download BBC iPlayer to a non-Windows.Q: How to apply map-reduce to a single file in MongoDB? Suppose we have a collection of documents named movie. Each document has a field which is named count. This field could be undefined or even an integer. Now I want to apply a map-reduce job to this collection. However the output of the map-reduce job is a single integer which has the sum of all movie.count. I need this integer to contain the number of movies with at least one undefined count field. Is there a way to do it? I thought about creating a user defined function and simply count the number of documents in which count is undefined. Then run the map-reduce on this collection and then return the result from the user defined function but I don't know how to do it.

Thanks for your help. A: I cannot say I had much luck with this, but I did manage to get the results I wanted. First we need to add a new field called emptyCount.

db.movie.ensureIndex({count: 1}, {capped: true, dropDups: true})

Then we create our own Mongoose aggregate function.

var collection = db.movie; //

Find the total number of movies without a

count of 0 collection.aggregate( // match
the movies based on the search criteria [{$match:{count: {$exists:false}}}, // group all of the documents with the same values {$group:{_id:"$_id", count:
{$sum: 1}}}], 0cc13bf012
